"motives, so laudable in themselves, will, I trust, engage the candor and indulgence of my readers for any defects in the following performance. *

The East-Indies, and particularly Bengall, are now become so important an object and concern to Great-Britain, that every elucidation thereof, must I think be acceptable, that is founded on facts, just observations, and faithful recitals.

Through a course of thirty years residence in Bengali, my leisure hours were employed in collecting materials relative to the transactions, revolutions and(...)".
